A SPANISH ALLIANCE. "It is curious to observe," says the "Saturday Review," "how little thought is given by the English public to the political side of the Spanish marriage. This is due to two causes, the human interest in a 'love match' which dominates the majority, and the gross ignorance of Spanish affairs which prevails everywhere in England. There prevails the delusion that Spain does not matter in these days, she is decadent, and need not be seriously considered. Unfortunately it was Lord Salisbury who made this fiction current; it is not the opinion of those who are responsible for the conduct of European affairs. By them the Spanish match is looked upon as one of the cleverest moves of an astate royal diplomatist. If some European nations can afford to ignore Spain England is not among them, nor is any Power to whom the Mediterranean is an object of interest. The States outside of that category are not 'Powers' in any proper sense of the term. The development of international intercourse places Spain in a position still more privileged than she enjoyed after the discovery of the New World. Geographically the growth of maritime commerce and of the overseas empire of other States gives her the command of sea routes even more securely than she he'd it after the exploits of the Conquistadores in the sixteenth century. When the Panama Canal is finished, if ever it is, Cadiz will be 800 miles nearer than Hamburg to San Francisco and also much nearer to the ports of Chili and Peru. Spain dominates geographically the Mediterranean routes and the ports of North Africa. Port Mahon is the striking centre proviled by nature to command Toulon, Algiers, and Bizerts, while with Cadiz in the hands of her friends England could absolutely bar the entrance of the sea which has been from time immemorial the highway of Empire. Vigo again is the natural an enemy from the North. A close alliance with Spain, or even substantial relations of friendship, must therefore go a long way to ighten our task of supervising the road to

We may add that the increase of Spanish influence in South America has been very marked since the outbreak of the Hispano American War. This influence is not political in the sense that Spain desires or dreams of re-establishing herself in the New World, but now that the fear of a revival of Spanish political power in the Western hemisphere is over, the divided states of Latin America can look with respect and sympathy to the mother country, which can, in turn, do much to bring about a closer rapprochement between the more highly developed of these states. The friendship of Latin America might be given to the friends of Spain and might have great value were President Roosevelt's "big stick" to fall intothe hands of an excitable successor.

Again there is the Spanish Army to consider. Though half fed and harassed by Cuban, guerillas the garrison of Santiago made a capital fight against a superior American force and the Spanish home army contains much excellent fighting material and has been very thoroughly reorganised in recent years. The assistance of 100,000 such troops might prove valuable both to France and England in certain eventualities, especially in the event of the Morocco question ever becoming acute.

The Plague.

Yesterday's plague bulletin records two cases at Alexandria, both bubonic. One of the patients is brother to the woman who was found dead on Saturday last. He was under observation at Chatby. The other patient is a policeman belonging to Labbane caracol. A recovery is reported from Bibah.

Strange Fatality at a Funeral.

A number of native women were on Monday morning lamenting in a tent erected at Kom Ghurab, Misr el-Atika, Cairo, when a whirlwind carried the tent up. This caused the wall to which the tent was attached to fall on the women, killing six of them on the spot and causing slight injuries to several others, who were taken to the Kasr-el-Aini Hospital.

A Promising Artist.

Mlle. E. Zamorani, a young artist whose paintings are not unknown to Alexandrians, has just completed an excellent portrait of St. Anthony de Pardo, which she has presented to St. Catherine's Cathedral, on the altar of which it is at present exposed. The picture is of exceptional merit and reflects the greatest credit on the artist, as well as her teacher, Sig. Fasola, both of whom we congratulate.

British Chamber of Commerce.

The June issue of the Journal of the British Chamber of Commerce of Egypt is an unusually interesting number. The Concordat Preventif, the "Balance of Trade," the proposed new Legislature for Egypt, railway material contracts, and the Customs returns for April are the subjects specially dealt with, while of course there is the usual statistical and other information which is regularly embodied in the journal.

Attempted Robbery at Ibrahimieh.

On Monday evening a we'l-known lady of Ihrahimiah was attacked while she lay in bed by a native servant, who entered her room by the window. Her screams soon attracted the attention of the ghaffir, who promptly arrested the man. He pretended that he had committed the act under the influence of drink, but as the lady has a large stock of jewels this is doubted. The lady lives all alone in an isolated building. The evening in question she had been dining at the Windsor Hotel and had been escorted home by an Armenian gentleman friend.

ORGAN RECITAL AT ST. GEORGE'S. JERUSALEM.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT). Jerusalem, June 7.

Mr. Haydn Righton gave his fourth organ recital on Wednesday, the 6th inst., and it was, in some respects the best of the series. It will be seen from the programme, which is given below, that he was assisted on this occasion by M. Laurent and Herr Völker, and it can safely be said that Jerosalem is happy in possessing such accomplished performers as these gentlemen are upon their respective instruments, and that they too were fortunate in having such a sympathetic accompanist as Mr. Righton proves himself to be on these occasions. The selections were well chosen, but perhaps some day Mr. Righton will present the whole of Beethoven's Sonata Pathétique. The following was the programme :-

1. Fifth Organ Sonata Mendelssohn
(a) Andante, (b) Andante con moto,

(c) Allegre maestoso.

2. Trio. Adagio (Sonata Pathétique) Beeth Cornet, M. Laurent ; Flute, Herr Völker ; Organ, Mr. Haydn Righton.

AL AZHAR.

THE RECENT "REGRETTABLE" INCIDENTS.

"Al Lewa" states that the Minister of the nterior recently summoned the Chancellor of the University of Al Azhar before him and informed him that the Government viewed with regret the conduct of the undisciplined "Talaba" (students) of the great mosque, in regard to which a complaint had been made by Mr. Sheldon Amos, judge of the Native Court, who recently visited the University accompanied by ladies, and, as we have already stated, met with considerable rudeness on the part of a number of students and hangerson. Sheikh Selim Bishri was requested to arrange for a new system of receiving visitors at the University, and was informed that a detachment of police would be stationed near the mosque to prevent any repetition of such misconduct in the future.

With reference to the complaint against the the Al Azhar students to which we recently made reference, "Al Lewa" writes :- "We sent a representative of our journal to Al Azhar to enquire whether there was any foundation for the statements recently made by the "Egyptian Gazette." He obtained an interview with Sheikh Hassanein el Boulski, a member of the Administration of the University, who declared that the students were busied in their studies at the time of the alleged misconduct, viz., shortly before sunset. when a sudden shower of rain caused considerable confusion. The visitors standing among the 'Talaba' who were hurrying each to his 'rowak,' to take shelter, were probably jostled in the general scurry and disorder."

The Sheikh assured the representative of "Al Lewa" that all courteons visitors to Al Azhar were welcomed, adding that it was one of the principles of Islam to treat visitors with courtesy.

Such is "Al Lewa's" explanation. We have two questions to ask. Firstly, was Sheikh Hassanein el Boulaki present at the time of the alleged rudeness? Secondly, how comes it that a judge whose knowledge of Arabic is far above the average could make such an error as to mistake unintentional jostling for deliberate and continued rudeness? We find it difficult to believe that Mr. Amos could have so misinterpreted the gestures and acts of the students.

Our contemporary will, we hope, give us a more convincing explanation of the "ragging" to which an Indian student was recently subjected, for the horrid crime of sympathising with Egypt and Great Britain and questioning the propriety of the recent Turkish aggressions at Tabah and El Rafah.

ARABI INTERVIEWED.

HIS APPRECIATION OF ENGLAND.

The Rev. William Robertson writes in "Life and Work": "As we travelled by railway from Port Said to Cairo, they pointed out to us the field of Teles Kebir, the scene of the battle in which the rebellion and power of Arabi were crushed by the victory of Sir Garnet Wolseley. The entrenchments he raised can still be seen. and many relics of the famous fight remain.

"After his defeat Arabi was condemned to be executed. But ultimately, on the intervention of the British, his life was spared and he and his associates were banished to Ceylon. There he remained a prisoner for eighteen years. About four years ago, as the result of appeals made on his behalf in the House of Commons, he was allowed to return to Egypt.

"It was with considerable interest that we received an invitation to pay a visit to Arabi in his home in Cairo.

"On arriving at a somewhat poor-looking louse in a back street, we were shown into a dull, bleak room, rather meanly furnished; the chairs, covered with red velvet, were greatly faded, and the carpet was old and threadbare. Here we were received by Arabi himself. Although only sixty-five, he looks considerably older. He is tall, but rather bent and feeble looking. He was dressed in black, with an overcoat and tarboosh. He speaks English to a limited extent, but the conversation was mostly carried on in Arabic, one of the friends to whose influence we owed our introduction acting as interpreter.

"There was something pathetic in the sight of the stern old warrior, now so broken and subdued. He conversed quite frankly about both his former experiences and his present position, expressing himself as deeply grateful to the British, to whom, he is well aware, he s indebted for his life. He spoke in terms of warm appreciation of the marvellous work which Britain has done for Egypt, and especially of the invaluable services which Lord Cromer has rendered to the country. He said that his own aim had been to deliver Egypt from incompetent rule and from the abuses from which it was suffering, and added that now he could see that under British control the country has obtained nearly all those benefits which he had fought in the hope of securing.

"Two remaining abuses, however, he would desire to see remedied. One of these is the existence of separate courts of justice for the trial of natives and of foreigners. In his opinion, the time has come when there should be one law for all, and one mode of trial for native and foreigner alike. The other abuse which he considered detrimental to the prosperity of the country is the continuance of the tax on date-palm trees. The date is so important, from a commercial point of view, that Arabi considers that it would be for the welfare of the country if this tax were removed.

"By and by, he touched more directly on his own personal affairs. Formerly he had been possessed of considerable private means, but at the time of his condemnation these were taken possession of by the Government, and now he lives on a pension of £600 a year, which he owes to the influence of the British Government, He has, however, a family of sixteen children, and this allowance, he thinks, is insufficient to maintain them in comfort. He contrasts with his own case the treatment accorded by Britain to Boer Generals after the South African War. Of course, one felt that there were two sides to the question; but it was impossible not to feel a touch of sympathetic pity for the old man in the way in which the matter presents itself to him.

"He expressed a kind interest in our visit to Egypt, and conversed on many ordinary topics. One remark he made incidentally rather amused us. He referred with something of pride to the fact that a representation of him had been placed in Madame Tussaud's exhibition in London. This he seemed to regard as a distinction.

"During the course of our interview coffee was served in Egyptian fashion, and at the close Arabi asked us to leave him our visiting carde, and gave us his in exchange, writing his autograph on each of them-'Ahmad Arabi, The Egyptian.'

"Altogether it was an interesting interview Yet, when we tried to think what might have been if this man had won instead of losing at Tel-el-Kebir, we marvelled the more at the wonderful results which have been brought about, both for Egypt, and for the world, through the failure of the enterprise of which he had been the unfortunate leader.'

PENSION AND GRATUITY SCHEME.

The following regulations have come into force in regard to pensions and gratuities of officials and employes of the Egyptian and Sudan Governments:—
1. Officials and employés transferred with-ont a break in their service from the service of the Sadan Government to that of the Egyptian Government are permitted to count their service in the Sudan Government towards the pension or gratuity to which they will be eventually entitled for their service in the Egyptian Government, unless they wish at once to realize such pension or gratuity as would accrue to them for their service in the Sudan Government. In the latter case their service in the Sudan Government will not count towards the pension or gratuity to which they will be entitled for their service to the Egyptian Government.

They must notify their choice in writing to the Administration to which they belong in the month following their transfer, in default of which the Egyptian Government will pay their eventual pension or gratuity, calculating it entirely on the basis of the services rendered to it subsequent to their transfer.

The payment of pensions or gratuities of such officials and employés who have chosen to accumulate their service in the two Governments will be calculated on the total service. in accordance with the Egyptian pension law. Periods served under Sadan Government south of the 12th parallel of N. latitude will be reckoned as a third more than their actual duration.

The years passed in the Sudan in the service of the Sudan Government by those officials and employés comprised in Category B., mentioned in the pension law of the Sudan, will be augmented by a quarter of their dura-This increase will be calculated on the basis of the length of effective service in the Sudan itself augmented by a third of the length of time passed South of the 12th parallel, N. latitude. 2. The officials and employes transferred without break of service from the Egyptian

Government to the Sudan Government are also allowed to count their service in the Egyptian Government towards payment of pension or gratuity to which they would ultimately be entitled for their services to the Sudan Government, unless they elect to take at once the payment of the pension or gratuity accruing to them for their services to the Egyptian Government. In this last case their services to the Egyptian Government will not count towards the payment of the pension or gratuity to which they might be entitled for their services to the Sudan Government

They must notify their choice in writing to this latter Government during the month following their transfer, in default of which the Sudan Government will pay their pension or gratuity calculated on the services rendered to it subsequent to their transfer.

The payment of the pension or the gratuity of those officials and employer who have chosen to accumulate their services in the two Governments will be calculated on the total service in accordance with the Sudan pension law. However, the period passed in the service of the Egyptian Government, whether in times of war, in the Sudan, or the Red Sea Coasts, will be calculated in accordance with the Egyptian pension law. The total of the periods passed in the service of the Egyptian Government, adding the augmentation for service whether in time of war, or in Sadan. or in Red Sea littoral, will be diminished by one fifth.

THE SUDAN.

INTERNATIONAL STATUS.

We are in a position to state that the news published by a local rewspaper, to the effect that the British Government has taken occa sion of the desire of the Italian Government to appoint Consuls in the Sudan to make a nove for the suppression of the Capitulations in that country, is entirely misleading. The Capitulations in what is now an Anglo-Egyptian Possession were suppressed from the day of its reconquest by the combined forces of the two occupying Powers. It is quite an under stood thing that any Power desirous of appoint ng Consuls in the Sudan and obtaining the exequator for them will not lay claim to any exceptional jurisdiction.

GENERAL LOCK-OUT DECLARED

WORKMEN TO ISSUE NEWSPAPER.

In our issue of yesterday we reported that the compositors of our Cairo contemporary Les Pyramides" had gone out on strike and that they had been joined later by those of several other Cairo newspapers. We learn however, from enquiry made in Cairo, that although the compositors of "Les Pyramides" have struck work in the first instance a general lock-out was decided upon by the proprietors of the "Bosphore," "Bourse Egyptienne," L'Egypte, " "L'Imparziale, " "Journal du Caire," "Progrès," and "Pyramides," who have formed a strong combination. The lock-out is the result of the continuous demand for higher wages and reduced hours of work on the part of the compositors, and was finally necessitated by the support which the compositors of the combined papers were tendering to their colleagues who were on strike.

A daily bulletin of the most important news will be issued from to morrow until the end of the lock-out by the papers mentioned for distribution to subscribers.

We understand that the workmen intend to publish a paper themselves with a view to torcing the masters' hands.

A telegram received as we are going to press states that the men have approached the masters with a view to a settlement. A meeting will be held to-day.

FOOTBALL AMONG NATIVES.

MR. ALDERSON OFFERS TROPHY FOR COMPETITION.

In our leading article on Monday, dealing with sport in Egypt, we stated that "the public-spirited enthusiast who would give a cup or other trophy for competition at football among native teams would not only be a missionary of enlightened civilization, but assisting even in a minor degree by the aid of sport the universal brotherhood of manthe ideal of the dreamer and the despair of those who have seen much and lived long." That public-spirited enthusiast has come forward in the person of Mr. G. B. Alderson, who perhaps more than anyone in Alexandria has shown a true public spirit. Mr. Alderson writes :- Reading your leading article of Monday on sports, I notice you think an offer of a trophy or prize for competition at football among native teams would do good. I shall be pleased to offer such a prize, of the value of ten guineas (£10.10), the prize to be such as the committee of sports think most suitable." We hope that Mr. Alderson's sporting offer will be promptly accepted and that the idea expressed in our article will bear fruit. Our columns are open for any suggestions which our readers may think fit to make.

HOW JAPS LEARNT TO SHOOT.

That the Japanese know how to shoot has been made apparent to the nations, but it would puzz'e most people to say who gave them their first lesson in the use of fire-arms. I might possibly be supposed that they borrow ed the art, as they have borrowed other things, from their Chinese neighbours, who were certainly acquainted with the virtues of villainous salpetre long before ganpowder was introduced into Europe. But it was no Chinese musketry instructor who taught the Jap to handle a gun. The lesson came from a Portuguese traveller and soldier of fortune, one of the companions of the renowned Fernand Mendez Pinte, who tells the story. Pinto has been called the prince of liars, but the libel is quite without justification. He was an accomplished traveller. Amongst other things, he went to Lhassa, and took down a sermon preached by the Dalai Lama; but that is another story. His adventures in Japan were not the least interesting part of his experiences. He tells us that when sailing the Eastern seas he and his comrades were wrecked and left stranded on a desert island. There they were picked up by a Chinese pirate. From his craft, after a series of mishaps, they landed on the island of Tanixuma, which may be identified with Tanega Shima, just to the south of the southernmost of the four great islands of Japan. Here they were well received by the Governor, who asked many questions about Portugal, "whereunto," says Pinto, "we rendered him such answers as might rather fit his humour than agree with the truth." Invited on shore by the Japanese Governor of Tanega Shima, the Portuguese employed themselves in fishing, hunting, or visiting the temples of these Gentiles, as Pinto calls them. It happened that the Governor, when out riding, saw one of them-Diego Zaimo'oshooting with an arquebus, "wherein he was very expert." The Governor had never set eyes on a gun before, and was so mightily taken with this manner of shooting that he desired to be informed of the secret of the powder, which he concluded must be some sort of sorcery. Proud of the sensation he had created, Diego 'made thee shoots' for the Governor's benefit, bringing down a kite and two turtle doves. The Governor was so delighted that he told Diego to get on his horse, and so rode with him to the palace. accompanied by a great crowd. Diego gave his arquebus to the Governor, who declared that he valued it more than all the treasures of China, and then persuaded his guest to teach him how to make gunpowder. Clever Japanese craftsmen were employed to make guns of the same pattern; and before Pinto and his companions left the island—that is, within five or six months-six hundred muskets had been turned out. The fame of the new weapon was soon carried across what we now call the Van Diemen Straits to the island of Kiu-Kiu, Pinto's kingdom of Bungo. The king, who was possibly no more than a Daimio of high degree subject to the ruler of all Japan, having heard of the arrival of the Portuguese at Tanega Shima, and of the wonders of their discourse, wrote to the Governor asking that they might be forwarded to his capital; "for I have heard of a truth," he wrote, "that these same men have entertained you at large with all matters of the whole universe, and have affirmed unto you on their faith that there is another world greater than ours, inhabited by black and tawny people." The Governor was unwilling to part with Diego Zeimote until that marksman had taught bim to shoot as straight as he could himself; but he sent Pinto and another Portuguese. These two were rowed across the Straits, and, after a long journey by land, came to "Fuchea," the capital, this doubtless being the Fukuoka of our maps, on the north-west coast. The Jane "King" was soffering at the time from gont; Wed 13 but Pinto, according to his own version, cured him in a month, by means of "a certain wood infased in water." While the King was laid up, the Portuguese traveller enlightened him and the grandees of the Court on the subject of the universe in general and the Kingdom of Portugal in particular, devoting his leisure time to sport. He shot a great store of turtles and quails with his arquebus; and this new manner of shooting, he writes, seemed no less marvellous to the inhabitants of this land than it had been to those of Tenaga Shima.

But the first introduction of firearms into the Kingdom of Bungo threatened at one time to have tragic consequences for the Portaguese. The King's son wanted to learn how to shoot, and begged Pinto to teach him. Pinto did his best to put off the young prince ; but one day, when the Portuguese was asleep, the prince, seeing the arquebus hanging on the wall, took it down, charged it about two spans deep with powder, and then stole off with his prize. Selecting an orange tree as a mark, he aimed carefully, and then fired, the result being that the barrel burst, and the young gentle man's right thumb was all but blown off. Two Japane e boys whe were with him ran away, and raised the cry that the prince had been shot by the stranger's gun, and Pinto was roused by an angry mob, who put him into irons, while the priests "servants of the devil" he styles them-loudly required that he should be tortured to death. Fortunately the "King," carried in a chair, appeared on the scene, and, on hearing Pinto's explanations, ordered him to be set at liberty. Pinto at the same time undertook to heal the prince's wound, and, though no "chirargion," managed to do it in the space of a month, for which he received a fee of fifteen hundred ducate. The Portuguese then returned to Tanega Shime, whence they sailed for Liampo, "which is a seaport of the Kingdom of China where at that time the Portugals traded," Liampo being the modern Ning-po.

Some time later - namely, in 15-6-when Pinto was sent by the Portuguese Viceroy, Don Alfonso de Noronha, on a mission to the King of Bongo, he found that there were above thirty thousand arguebases in the city of Fuchea alone He was also informed by certain merchants of good credit that in "the whole island of Jappon" there were above three hundred thousand fire arms, and that he Japanese were exporting them, by way f trade, to the Liu-Kiu islands. 'There is not so small an hamlet," Pinto writes, "but hath a hundred at least; as for cities and great towns, they have them by thousands, whereby one may perceive what the inclination of this people is, and how much they are naturally addicted to the wars, wherein they take more delight than any other nation that we know." Pinto, by-the bye, was no bad judge of national character. The Chinese, he states in another part of his book, are of a weak and effeminate character, of no account in regard to valour, and easily overawed by Mongols, Shans, Annamese, and others. This ignorant adventurer, therefore, had formed a more accurate estimate both of Chinese and Japanese than that which found favour with European critics, when Japan went to war with China. The truth of what he said about the martial spirit of the Japanese has since been still more forcibly confirmed. The fact is that Fernand Mendez Pinto was a more trust. worthy traveller than English geographers have been ready to admit. Partly owing, perhaps, to to the obscurity of the original, but also, one suspects, to the ignorance of Heori Cogan his English translator, the story of his wanderings is often obscure and difficult to follow; but it is full of striking episodes, and contains much valuable information about the history and geography of the Far East. Edited and annotated by the light of modern research, it would make a lively and instructive volume. In any case, Pinto's story of how the Japanese first learnt to use the firearms of the West is worth remembering, and one would like to know whether there is anything in the Japanese annals that would confirm the accuracy of his narradans l'affaire SALINAS STAGNI. La Cour de Cassation a rectifié les erreurs des magistratures inférieures italiennes et a rétabli l'application des véritables règles juri dignas. Ces règles constituent une garantie primordiale pour les Colonies en ce que le défendeur. dans un procès, ne peut être sacrifié au demandeur et a droit, lorsque l'intérêt de sa cause touche à des personnes d'autres nationalités, à pouvoir développer ses moyens, en présence de tous les intéressés.

La Cour de Cassation a, en même temps, montré que apprécier le fond avant la compétence pour déterminer cette compétence même, ce qui avait été la base des décisions d'Alexandrie et d'Ancône, constituait une violation flagrante des principes du droit.

MM. Salinas méritent tous les éloges pour avoir, malgré les résistances et les obstacles de toute nature qu'ils ont rencontré et qui auraient pu décourager bien d'autres, poursuivi, jusqu'au bout, une lutte qui intéressait toutes les Colonies.

Ils ont finalement triomphé; par contre, MM. Stagni ayant échoué à Rome aussi bien qu'à la Cour d'Appel mixte, supportent tous les frais du procès.

Au nom de Sa Majesté Victor Emmanuel III par la grâce de Dieu et par la volonté Nationale.

l'avocat Lodovico Ferroni d'Ancone, avec élection de domicile à Rome chez l'avocat Valdemiro Storoni. Vu le recours tormé pour l'annulation de l'arrêt prononcé par la Cour d'Appel d'Ancône les 8 février-ler mars 1905, y enrégistré le 3 mars même année au 354 Vol. 19 pag. 171 A.G. avec L. 18.

Général d'Italie d'Alexandrie (Egypte) par

Vu les moyens de rejet.

Ouï le rapport sur la cause, présenté par le Conseiller Chev. Augusto Setti à l'audience publique du 6 avril 1906.

Oui les défendeurs, avocats Vivante Césare et Grippo Pasquale pour la demanderesse, Ferroni Lodovico et Valdemiro Storoni pour la défenderesse.

Oui le M.P. en la personne du chev. officier Ferdinando Carlucci, substitut du procureur général, lequel a conclu à la cassation, sans renvoi, de l'arrêt attaqué, d'après les premier et second moyens du recours.

Attendu que la raison sociale italienne G. Stagni e figli, par acte du 15 juillet 1903, citait en justice devant le tribunal Consulaire d'Italie d'Alexandrie (Egypte) la raison s Fratelli Salinas, également de nationalité ita lienne et exposait : Que, le 30 du mois de juin précédent, elle avait vendu à la raison sociale Fratelli Salinas 2266 obligations Chemins de fer Keneh-Assouar de la valeur nominale de L.St. 45.330, au prix de 97 %, s'engageant à consigner les titres Alexandrie et à payer à la dite raison sociale Salinas, la provision de un huitième pour cent ; qu'après la conclusion du contrat, la raison sociale Salinas avait soulevé la prétention que, dans la vente étaient compris les coupons semestriels échus le 1er juillet, jour qui suivait immédiatement celui de la vente et que, un accord à l'amiable n'ayant pas été possible sur ce point et la raison sociale Salinas ayant refusé de retirer les titres et de payer le prix convenu, la demanderesse avait le droit de demander, comme effectivement elle demandait, la condamnation de Fratelli Salinas au paiement du dit prix et des intérêts s'y rattachant.

Les parties ayant comparu à l'audience du 18 août et la cau e ayant été portée ensoite, pour la discussion, au 1er septembre 1903, la raison sociale Fratelli Salinas faisait valoir: que c'est en qualité d'intermédiaire qu'elle avait contracté avec la raison sociale Stagni et qu'elle avait acquis les ob'igations pour compte de la Barque Egyptienne appartenant à une autre nationalité; que l'intention commune ayant été que l'acquisition des obligations comprit les coupens semestriels à échéance du ler juillet, elle avait du se refuser à recevoir les titres desquels on avait détaché ces conpons; que, par acte notifié le 16 juillet, elle avait dejà cité devant le Tribunal Mixte d'Alexandrie la raison sociale Stagni et la Barque Nationale Egyptienne pour l'éxécution ou la résolution du contrat et que, en attendant, ayant été citée elle même, le 13 août suivant, par la Banque devant le dit tribunal pour entendre déclarer résiliée la vente des obligations, el'e avait dû, à son tour, appeler en garantie a raison sociale Stagni.

Cela étant, la raison sociale Fratelli Salinas excipait, avant tout, de l'incompétence du tribunal consulaire. Mais ce Tribunal se déclara, au contraire, compétent et accueillit les demandes présentées par la raison sociale

Ce jugement ayant été confi mé par la Cour d'Appel d'Ancône, Salinas frères ont, en voie principale, demandé l'annulation de cette décision pour incompétence des tribunaux italiens à juger le présent litige.

Attendu qu'aux termes de l'art. 9 du règlement d'Organisation judiciaire pour les proces mixtes en Egypte, approuvé par la loi italienne du 30 juillet 1875, il a été constitué une juridiction mixte qui, tout en laissant aux Consuls la connaissance des causes entre leurs sujets, a été appelée à juger tous les litiges en matière civile et commerciale entre indigènes et étrangers et entre étrangers de nationalités diffé-

Or, la décision attaquée, pour déclarer que le tribunal Consulaire italien en Egypte avait été compétemment investi, a examiné en fait et en droit le contrat intervenu entre la raison sociale Stagni et Fratelli Salinas et a retenu que les rapports entre Stagni et Salinas devaient être considérés isolément et indépendamment des rapports entre Salinas et la Banque d'Egypte.

Il est certain que, sur la question de savoir si la demande de la raison sociale Stagni en exécution de l'achat-vente des obligations des chemins de fer, devait être jugée par la magistrature consulaire italienne ou par la magistrature mixte, le seul et unique criterium pour la solution était celui de l'existence ou non d'un

Mais pour affirmer cet intérêt mixte ou pour l'exclure, la recherche ne devait pas consister à interprèter le contrat en contestation ou à définir son caractère juridique de commission ou d'entremise, étant donné que dans les questions de compétence entre deux magistratures différentes qui puissent connaître de la même question, il est de principe général de droit sur les juridictions que le fond doit être examiné. mais non jugé.

Puisque il s'agit en substance de deux questions séparées et distinctes, bien que celle de compétence se rattache à celle de fond, elle ne peut jamais lui être subordonnée sinon on tomberait dans cette absurdité juridique de inger en second lieu ce qui doit l'être en premier. Donc, pour résoudre telle question de compétence, il faut rechercher les éléments nécessaires, indépendamment de la décision sur le fond du procès et les distraire, au contraire, de l'objet de la contestation, en ayant égard tant à la demande du demandeur qu'aux exceptions du défendeur. Cette règle générale, qui est un guide sur et certain pour déterminer si la connaissance d'un procès doit être attribuée à l'autorité judiciaire ou a une autre juridiction spéciale est également applicable lorsqu'il s'agit de décider si un litige doit être jugé par la juridiction consulaire italienne ou par la juridiction mixte égyptienne, vu que la question de compétence se reproduit dans les mêmes termes et à la même nature. Cette règle exige même une observation plus rigoureuse dans les procès qui se déroulent en Egypte devant la magistrature consulaire, puisque, en l'absence d'une autorité supérieure sur les conflits entre les deux juridictions, il n'y aurait pas d'autre moyen pour obtenir un jugement complet et unique dans l'intérêt de nos compatriotes et pour empêcher, par suite, la contrarié é des décisions. Mais ce but ne pourrait jamais ou rarement être atteint par le système contraire de subordonner la question de compétence à celle du fond, puisque la conséquence en étant la possibilité de voir soumettre la même question de fond à l'appréciation des deux juridictions différentes, on rendrait plus faciles les contrariétés de jugements. Et c'est précisément ce que l'on constate au cas actuel, la magistrature mixte en Egypte ayant interprêté et défini le contrat dont il est question, d'une manière tout à fait contraire au jugement consulaire italien, confirmé par la Cour d'Appel d'Ancône.

Or en application des principes qui viennent l'être émoncés, si on s'était borné à examiner eulement le fond du litige et les moyens échangés entre les parties ainsi que les documents à l'appui, l'intéret mixte en serait pleinement ressorti. Il est constant que la raison ociale Stagni a admis ce qui était un élement earactéristique du contrat de médiation, c'est dire son obligation de payer la provision de nuitième pour cent sor la valeur nominale des titres, vendus aux Salinas. Il était constant, en fait, que la même provision avait été promise par la Banque Nationale Egyptienne, qui avait acquis les suadits titres. Il n'était pas ontesté que les Salinas étaient non seulement des banquiers, mais aussi des intermédiaires. Et il résultait des actes qu'il y avait eu presque en même temps deux citations, l'une de la raison sociale Stagni contre les Salinas devant le tribunal consulaire, pour faire ordonner la consignation des titres sans les coupons semes triels parachevés et l'autre des Salinas contre la raison sociale Stagni et la Banque Nationale Egyptienne devant le tribunal mixte, pour f.ire régler les suites du dit contrat et que ces deux citations avaient été suivies d'une troisiène de la Barque Nationale Egyptienne contre les Salinas devant le même tribunal mixte avec l'appel de la raison Sociale Stagni pour garantir les Salinas. Tous ces éléments qui existaient ainsi en la cause suffisaient pour faire retenir comme certaine, de la manière la plus claire et la plus précise, l'existence d'un rapport mixte. Et comme, par l'effet de l'art. 9 du susdit réglement d'organisation dans les procès mixtes en Egypte, l'unification du litige n'était pas possible devant le tribunal consulaire italien, il en résultait la conséquence nécassaire que ce tribunal aurait du déclarer son incompétence et remettre à la magistrature mixte la solution over the Sudan, which seems to point to a du fond du débat, relativement au cars ctère juridique du contrat du 30 j'illet 1903, qui consistait exactement à éxaminer et à décider s'il s'agissait d'un contrat de commission intervenu exclusivement entre Stagni et Salinas,ou, au contraire, d'un contrat passé entre la raison sociale Stagni et la Banque Nationale d'Egypte avec l'entremise des frères Salinas.

Attendu que la décision attaquée ayant déclaré la compétence du tribunal consulaire italien en Egypte contrairement aux principes ci-dessus exposés, cette décision doit être cassée sans renvoi.

Vu les art. 542 et 545 du Code de procédure civile.

PAR CES MOTIFS.

Casse, sans renvoi, l'arrêt des 8 février-1er nars 1905 de la Cour d'appel d'Ancône pour incompétence du tribural Consulaire italien en Egypte. Condamne la raison sociale Stagni succombante aux frais etc., etc. et ordonne la restitution du dépôt.

Ainsi décidé à Rome par la susdite Cour. séant au palais Altieri, le 9 avril 1906.

WEATHER IN EGYPT.

OFFICIAL SUMMARY.

The following summary of the weather in Egypt, the Sudan, and the surrounding region during the month of March, has been issued by the Survey Department :-

GENERAL CONDITIONS .- The month opened with four days of fine weather. Pressure was very high in an anticyclone to the west, but gradually gave way before the advance of a low pressure area of ill-defined shape, that assumed considerable intensity on the 5th when the centre lay apparently to the north of Port Said. The 6th was very stormy and rainy over the whole of Lower Egypt, and the storm, but without rain, appears to have reached the Persian Gulf on the 7th-or 8th. On the 6th pressure was highest south of Malta and continued so till the 9th. On the 10th the normal trend of the isobars with high pressure over the Sahara was renewed, and on the next day a Voffshoot from a very extensive depression which had slowly traversed Russia led to southerly winds in the north Delta. On the 12th pressure was very high to the west of Alexandria but a low pressure system prevailed to the north of Italy with a well marked V over the western Mediterranean. This developed into a deep secondary over eastern Austria on the 13th, which induced southern winds and warm weather in Egypt, on that day and the next. On the 15th and 16th pressure was highest over Malta but the centre of maximum barometer moved gradually southwards on to the Sahara. On the 20th the anticyclonic area advanced eastwards to near Alexandria and a low pressure system appeared to the north of Trieste. On the 21st the latter lay to the west of Turkey and a new depression appeared over Tunisia. This moved, somewhat rapidly at first, northeastwards to the Adriatic where it remained almost stationary. Gradients were steep, but owing to the distance of the centre, there was no effect on Egyptian weather beyond a veering of the winds to E and S. E. and a steady rise of temperature till the 25th. On the 20th another low pressure area appeared to the west of Algeria. From it on the 28th two secondaries developed over the western basin of the Mediterranean and the mouth of the Adriatic respectively. The latter moved northeastward over Greece on the 29th, Macedonia on the 30th, and the Aegean sea on the 31st. Hot weather prevailed in Egypt during this period, culminating on the 28th and 29th in a khamsin with some rain. The trough of the depression having passed on the 20th, the weather improved on the last two days of the month.

The first two decades were remarkably free from depressions, but during the last eleven days of the month, the normal high pressure to the west of Spain moved much further north, and a series of depressions entered the Mediterranean area from the Atlantic.

PRESSURE.—The mean barometer was almost everywhere above the normal for the month. This appears to be due, as far as concerns the Mediterranean region, to an absence of depressions. The highest barometric readings were obtained in Europe and Algeria generally about the 4th to 7th during the anticyclone of that period. In Egypt and the Sudan, the maxima occurred at all stations on the 7th or 8th. The lowest readings occurred towards the third week of the month, in connection with the low pressure area that lay to the west of Algeria, or the secondary. At the Egyptian stations the lowest barometer was recorded on the 29th, and in the Sudan generally about the 20th. The absolute values in Egypt and the Sudan respectively were maxima 771 0 mm. at Giza and Assitt and 771. 3. mm. at Wadi Halfa; minima: 755. 3. mm. at Port Said and 752. 4. mm. at Dueim.

considerable movement of the atmosphere in TEMPERATURE.—On the whole temperature has been somewhat above normal for the month, though there are many exceptions. Speaking roughly, the country between the Nile and the Red Sea was too warm, while that east and west of this region was too cold.

The highest values in Egypt were recorded from the 27th to 31st, and in the Sudan about the 30th. The lowest readings occurred about the 7th in the east Mediterranean district and at very various dates elsewhere.

The absolute maxima were 33° at Alexandria in Lower Egypt, 34° at Giza in Middle Egypt. 43° at Aswan in Upper Egypt, while the absolute minima for the same regions were respectively 5° at El Mehalla el Kubra, 4° at Giza, and 5° at Assignt.

WIND was about normal on the whole; if anything there was less of a westerly component than is usual in Egypt. The force was very small with the exception of the 6th, when strong winds were reported from the north coast; the 7th, when strong to very strong winds blew in the north-eastern Sudan, and the 20th, when a storm was reported from Wad Medani. The latter appears to have been connected with the fall of rain which occurred about that date on an area from Gallabat to Gondokoro.

At Mongalla it is worthy of note that the percentage of calms was much above the aver age for the past three years.

Mist was reported on three occasions during RAINFALL. - Normally the month of March s practically rainless throughout that part of the Nile basin which lies north of lat. 5 N. In the Delta the winter rains have ceased, and the very moderate amount, which falls on the eastern edge of the Abyssinian plateau, extends a short way westwards. In the equatorial region on the other hand rain is increasing rapidly towards the April-May maxi-

Commencing with the southern portion, the lake plateau had March rains above the average and the same conditions extended southwards and eastwards so that throughout British East Africa and German East Africa rainfall was considerably above the average.

Abnormal rain occurred over a wide are of Abyssinia about the middle of the month, similar to that which fell in February (See Summary No. 2, February 1906) since the Blue Nile gauge at Roseires was effected on March 16, and the Sobat (Baro) gauge at Gambela on March 14.

Another abnormal fall over a wide area occurred from the 17th to 22nd. This was most general on the 20th when it affected the Upper Blue Nile and Upper White Nile stations, the Bahr el Ghazal and Bahr el Jebel.

Apparently Abyssinia also experienced heavy rainfall at this date as Roseires gauge began to rise a second time on March 26.

These storms cannot be regarded as precursors of the summer or monsoon rains, since these have hardly passed the Equator at this period and also the first storm, like that of February, seems to have arrived from the eastward and to have travelled in a south westerly direction. They are quite exceptional occurrences, and although daily gauge readings exist for the Delta Barrage from 1846 to 1861 and for Assouan from 1871 to the present time, none of these 50 years show any rise in February or March such as these two rainbursts have caused this year, except a feeble one in 1847 at the end of March and some what larger ones in May 1847 and 1852.

RIVER AND LAKE GAUGES. - Lake Victoria, which was rising in February, continued to do so throughout March, and probably Lake Albert, which had ceased to fall last month, has done the same.

On the Bahr-el-Jebel the level fell steadily from the beginning of the mouth until the 16th when the rainstorm passed over this region and raised the river level by 30 cm. between then and the 22nd at Mongalla.

This rise was as usual imperceptible at Bor 134 kilometres further down stream, but at Ghaba-Shambé 197 kilometres more to the north rain must have fallen on the Bahr-el-Zaraf marshes as a slight rise took place.

On the Sobat a slight rise is shown by the gauges at both Tawfor (Nasser) and Doleib Hills about the middle of the month, but complete readings have not yet been received. On the Blue Nile the water level at Roseires rose from 11.53 metres on the 11th Feb. to 12.33 metres on the 25th Feb. and 12.64 metres on the 29th Mar., after which it fell. This rise markedly affected all the Blue Nile gauges and produced a total rise of 0.19 metres at Khartoum during the first week of April; this coming soon after the February rise which reached Khartoum on March 1-10 has checked the normal fall of the river and has turnished a very considerable volume of water, so that the very low summer levels which were to be anticipated from a poor flood and moderate Septemper and October rains, will now be replaced by fairly good ones as a result of 1) the heavy rains at the end of November, 2) those of February and 3) those of March; a wholly unexpected result produced by meteorological conditions which occur most rarely, as has been said above.

Below Khartoum the rise of February has affected the March levels of the river, while that of March will not reach stations until April. The range is of course less and the effect has been to reduce the amount by which the level is below the average, while on the Blue Nile the greater rise has produced readings above the average. H. Crookshank pacha, président du comité local, et M. Beckett, directeur général de la Corporation of Western Egypt, sont rentrés la Behrend & Co., 200 tons cotton seed semaine dernière au Caire, de retour de leur inspection du chemin de fer qui doit relier la ligne de la Haute Egypte à l'oasis de Khargeh. Actuellement, le railway est terminé sur un parcours de 50 kilomètres. Les ingénieurs de la Compagnie espèrent achever 50 autres kilomètres d'ici au mois de Septembre prochain.

Le passage suivant du rapport du Conseil d'administration de la Société des Ciments d'Egypte, qui sera présenté à l'assemblée géné rale ordinaire, convoquée pour le 5 Juillet à Broxelles, sera lu avec intérêt:

L'assemblée générale ordinaire du 6 Juillet 1905 a décidé de rembourser toutes les obligations 6 % par une émission d'actions. Mais. pour effectuer cette opération, il y a lieu d'attendre que les actions aient dépassé le pair, et le Conseil se réserve de choisir le moment le plus avorable pour faire cette émission, qui nous permettra de réaliser annuellement une économie considérable, tout en laissant à notre disposition un fonds de roulement représentant les sommes actuellement destinées au remboursement de ces obligations."

Nous prions instamment les personnes qui ne recevraient pas régulièrement notre Circulaire de nous aviser sans retard, afin que nous puissions prendre des mesures immédiates pour assurer la ponctualité du service d'expé-

GYPT'S SHEPHERD KINGS

PROF. FLINDERS PETRIE'S EXCAVATIONS.

One of the dim passages of history which as most fascinated theorists has, says a writer the "Times" been that of the conquest of e Ezyptians themselves it seemed incredible ow a swarm of barbarians could dominate eir high civilization; it was to them what ne subjugation of the Roman Empire by the orthern barbarians was to Jerome, or even to ome modern writers—a hideous anomaly ecause they could not understand the laws decay of nations. To historians the Hyksos ave served for many theories, from Josephus, ho identified them with the Jews, down to a ecent suggestion that they were both Hittites nd Etruscans. To obtain some tangible vidences about these people has been one f the main problems of research in Egypt. When Mariette found sphinxes and figures. nlike those of ordinary Ezyptians and bearccepted as Hyksos portraits; but the names eing entirely re-appropriations ought to have een a warning at first that the sculptures were learly of an earlier age. All that could be ortainly attributed to this mysterious people f an historical view from these. One purpose of the British School in work-ng at Tell el Yehndiye'n this part winter was search for any more traces in a site were it we'l known that Hyksos scarabs where ommonly found. And here it is that Professor inders Petrie has expavated an enormous arthwork camp. This camp was constructed of re 1500 B.c. by a nomadic people, who are entirely ignorant of construction in tone, brick, or even wood, and who trusted ntirely to archery for their defence. They had o pottery in common use, and therefore used resse's of feather and of wood. As many graves of the Hyksos age were found, the parlier inside the came, the later in a cemetery outside, and as the whole region has produced more scarabs of the Hyksos than of all the other ages of Egypt, it is obvious that the nomads who formed this camp were of this mysterious race.

The camp is a great earthen enclosure, quadrilateral, with rounded corners, much like many earth camps in other countries. It is about 1,500 ft. across, with a bank about 200ft. thick at the base. This bank was faced ontside with a stope of white stucco 70 ft. or 80 ft. long, at an angle of 35° to 45°. But the makers knew nothing of a gateway; the use of brick or wood did not enter into their scheme of defence, and their way of entering the camp was to make a sloping road about 200 ft. long. rising up over the great bank of the camp. Flanking walls were thrown out on each side of the sloping entrance, to enable archers to rake the road sideways at close quarters. We have here evidently a people in the well known stage of culture of central Asian nomads; great archers, like the Scythians, Persians, Parthians, or Turcomans, but depending entirely on earthwork for defence. Atter two or three generations in Egypt the system of fighting was entirely remodelled. The advantage of the walled forts of the Egyptians was recognised, and an immense stone wall over 40 ft. high, 6 ft. thick, and a mile in length was built around the earthwork, and earth filled in between that and the sloping face. But yet the old sloping entrance road was kept, and gateways in the wall were not accepted. Every point that we learn agrees exactly with the account of Manetho, when he states that the Hykeos were barbarians who within a hundred years organised a firm government and built a great walled camp. It is probable that this camp now before us is indeed the celebrated city of Avaris, but the details of the identification cannot be entered on here.

The cemetery of the Hyksos shows that they

the forms already common in E3ypt. But they imported a class of small unguent vases of black pottery with incised patterns, which are probably of Mediterranean origin.

probably of Mediterranean origin.

This site was only a small part of the work of the British School this winter, which was carried on by Professor Flinders Petrie with Messrs, Duncan, Gibart-Smith, Butler-Stoney, and Mrz. Petrie. The discovery and reconstruction of the Jewish town and temple of the High riest Onias was described on March 14 in the "Times." The history of the mound of Tall or Priest Onias was described on March 14 in the "Times." The history of the mound of Tell-er Retabeh, between Zagazig and I-mailia, has now been traced. Objects of the 9th and 12th dynasties were found, showing how early this region was occupied. The first fortifying of the site must have hear under Syrian influence as site must have been under Syrian influence, as a child burial was found under the corner of the city wall instead of memorial tablets such at the Ezyptians used for such a purpose. Rameses II. built a temple here, of which a some from one side of the front has been found, as well as parts from a great granite stele and of a group of the King and a god. Rameses III. re-fortified the whole city with a wall, and it was again fortified in later times. It was a store city, as the tomb of an official records that he was over the stores brought from "the divine land," probably Syris, or else Arabia. As this place is within a few miles of Pithom and is the only other large Egyptian town in the region, it can hard'y be other than the sister city of Raamses built by the Israelites. The history of it as built by Rameres II. and III. agrees with accounts of the city of Raamses.

The large cemetery of the ancient city of Goshen was also discovered, and proved to extend from about 1500 BC. down to Roman times. A fortified town in the Delta near Belbeis was examined and planned; it is certainly as old as the 19th dynasty, and was used for grain se res. It is not unlikely that it was one of the forts built by the Egyptians during the expolsion of the Hyksos from Avaris. Some other minor sites were also included in this year's work, which has succeeded in clearing up more sites and restoring more history than is often the case in a season's campaign.

THE GLORIES OF THEBES.

MR. RIDER HAGGARD ON ANCIENT

In a fascinating article in the June number of the "Pall Mall Magazine," Mr. Rider Hag gard, the novelist, revives for us, in a fine'; gypt by the Shepherd Kings or Hyksos. To illustrated article, the glories of Thebes, the city of pomp and valour that Homer sang. The article is illustrated with photos by the author's daughter.

It is calculated (we read) that science in its zeal, and greed in its hunger, have between them rifled here about a million tombs, while others are being discovered day by day Beyond that hill in the foot of which is hol lowed the beautiful temple of Queen Hatshepu the wise and strong, whose deep grave at the back of it was excavated but last year and found empty of her body, lies the Valley or Dead Kings. It is a solemn and indeed an awful place, naked and sere to the eye, blasted as it were into everlasting barrenness by the very breath of Osirie, god of the dead. These ng names of Hyksos Kings, they were greedily few acres of ground were their Westminster Abbey : one of the greatest things that a man among them could hope for was that his statue might be accorded the honour of a place in its side chapels.

The temple of Karnac, the reader may think ere two or three blocks of stone and a handful is but a ruin, which in some few centuries f scarabs, and very little could be gleaned must utterly disappear. Happily this is not so. Had it not been for the English occupation of Egypt, doubtless it would have dis appeared, since the lapse of time, the bigotry and the rage of man, the weakness of its foundations-for jerry-building was not unknown to the Egyptians-and the shock of earthquake have all combined to bring it to

Thus in 1899 no less than eleven of the huge columns fell, while more were threatened. Since then, however, Monsieur Legrain, an official of the Egyptian Antiquities Department, has taken the thing in hand and worked wonders, especially when the very modest funds at his di posal are considered. The great columns are composed of vast blocks of stone divided in the centre. There blocks, which otherwise could not be dealt with without very powerful machinery, the foundations having first been made good, he manipulated as the old Egyptians did - namely, by building a slope of sand to the required height, up which they are dragged upon a little tramway and so relaid in their proper places. When that column is finished the sand is removed and made use of to fill in some hollow. He is of opinion that by such means as these, given time and a moderate amount of money, say £27,000 more in all, he will be able to rebuild Karnac.

For my part I believe that he made no vain boast. I inquired of him how he would manage in the case of the gigantic roof slabs that rest upon the tops of the pillars in the Hypostyle Hall, many of which are entirely broken up and have vanished. He answered that he should replace them with blocks of cement, which from below it would be impossible to distinguish from those of stone. Also he pro poses to set in the various chapels casts of the statues that once stood there, taken from the originals of which so many are now scattered among the museums of the world. Indeed, in some instances this has been done already, and with excellent effect.

Ia short, I believe that travellers of the next generation will behold the unequalled fane of Karnac very much as it was when our Pharaoh of three thousand years ago marched Monsieur Legrain has made a great dis covery. When excavating a subterranean temple or crypt he found a large stele or foneral slab, and beneath it an enormous cache of statues, which at some period had been thrown into a well. At the time when I visited Karnac these were being dragged from the mad in which they have rested for millennia. Indeed, one bu dred and thirty had already been recovered relics of every age of Egyptian art, and many of them of extraordinary beauty though some were much calcined by fire-per haps at the time of the burning of the temple by Cambyses. Some of them are of the greatest artistic beauty and merit-portraits for the most part of royalties and archbishops who ruled and flourished during the two thousand years or so when Thebes of the Hundred Gates was in its glory.

GERMANY v. THE TURKISH UGANDA & H.M. COMMISSIONER Cheap Prepaid Advertisements. Davies

The Constantinople correspondent of the Frankfürter Zeitung" states that German sugar will shortly be able to compete under favourable conditions in the Turkish market. Many attempts to secure such conditions have failed in previous years, the chief difficulties being that German firms were not sufficiently well represented, nor did they find it convenient to export the "Concasse" sugar, which is most in demand on the Turkish market. Further, sugar exported by sea from Hamburg took nearly three weeks to reach its destination, and shippings were irregular and infrequent, whilst Russian and Austrian sugar was conveyed from O lessa and Trieste regularly every week and took two and seven days respectively to arrive.

But recently an arrangement has been come to whereby the Constantinople Wharfinger Company leases to the German importers large bondhouses capable of holding from 600 to 700 tons, and the German Levant line has promised cheap rates and more frequent sailings. Encashment of the prices per invoice is under-taken by the Deutsche Orientbank. Finally, everal refiners will now place Concasse sugar on the market. It is expected accordingly that the Turkish buyers, instead of, as heretofore, purchasing their sugar direct from the Austrian ship on Mondays, will now take their sugarfrom the bondhouses according to their requirements.

THE SULTAN OF ZANZIBAR.

The Sultan of Zanzibar, who was one of the guests at the luncheon given by the Lord Mayor to the Prince of Wales and the Elder Brethren of the Trinity House, has, as already stated, come to England for the sake of his health, but it is understood that His Highness will at the same time take the opportunity of discussing various matters in connection with his State with the Foreign Office. Certain changes are contemplated, which it is felt in Zanzibar, amongst the officials and the Arabs generally, would not tend to the good government of the State, and upon these it is desirable that the Sultan and Sir Edward Grey should have a frank exchange of views. It is well known that the Sultan's whole sympathies are with the English, to whom he owes his present position.

The Sultan is a young man of exceptional cultured Arab. He speaks English firently, and a little French. It is amusing to find that attentions of the police of an extra-metropolitan anburb. His chauffenr had to answer a summons for contravening the law in the fast driving of a motor-car in which His Highress and his secretary were riding. A discreet magistrate, with a due regard to the obligations of British hospitality, dismissed the offender with a caution .- The "Standard."

QUAINT BREWERY CUSTOMS.

Gazette," the brewers of a hundred years ago used to announce the qualities of their brew in quaintly worded advertisements. A Mr. John Walsby, one of their number, announced in May 1800, from the Sun Brewhouse, Battersea, Surrey, a curious porter, called "brilliant," which is stated (says the writer) to be "a genuine Porter, brewed on a peculiar principle. and for its Brilliancy has never been equalled in this country." It had, of course, every other imaginable virtue, and might be seen "any day at Mr. Wake's, of the Bedford Coffee house, under the Piazza, Covent Garden, he having a constant stock on Draught for his Customers.' Mr. Walsby modestly informs "the World at large" that he thinks proper to announce his Brewing Company six years later, a genius for finance being apparently one of its proprietor's many gifts.

In the "Morning Chronicle" of June 25, 1806, we read that at a "common hall" of the City of London, held always for the purpose on Mid-summer Day, Messrs. Enwar, Sanders, Brooks, and Jones were re elected ale-conners for the ensuing year. This institution is sometimes confused with that of ale taster, but the two offices were really different. The ale-conners were inspectors of weights and measures, as we should now call them, but the ale-taster was corcerned with the quality alone, not of ale and beer merely, but also of bread, within the jurisdiction of the court-leet by which he was appointed. It is said that in times when the wearing of leather breeches was common, the ale-taster used to pour a little of the liquor to be tested upon a wooden bench or "settle," and sit down upon it. If, after a certain length of time which long experience of this delightful process showed to be sufficient, he found himself adhering to the seat, the beer was considered not to be adulterated; but if, on the contrary, he could get away freely, it was proof that sugar had been used, which in those days was a high crime and misdemeanour. Another heating, it was taken to show that the beer neither much work nor much pay.

This week (says the "East African Standard") Uganda enters on a new phase of its existence with a new Commissioner. Mr. Hesketh Bell, C.M.G., comes to Uganda with a record of service which only falls to the lot of few Administrators. In the Leeward Islands he met in the early stages of his administration with difficulties, under which had he been a weeker man he would have fallen. The Island of Dominica six years ago was undergoing s great state of depression, and there is no doubt its present state of prosperity is very largely due to the energy and ability displayed by the late Governor. One of his first steps was to obtain freedom of Government. It had been the custom for years for Dominica to submit all new laws or ordinances to the Government of the neighbouring island, Antigua, a system which was faulty, and which Mr. Bell soon had altered. In consultation with a large number of planters, Mr. Hesketh Bell devised a scheme of insurance against the terrible havoc wrought by West Indian hurricanes This scheme was at first received very coldly amongst the business people of the Mother Country, and it was not until Mr. Bell got into close touch with some of the leading houses a Lloyd's that the scheme took definite shape. To-day Lloyd's will insure buildings, cultivations, and crops at 40s. per cent. against hurricanes or volcanic disturbances, and the old story of sudden poverty from disaster is at an end, and the West Indies will become increasirgly prosperous.

Uganda may, therefore, welcome the new Commissioner with every satisfaction, and we call upon our neighbouring settlers to see that the welcome they give is not one of words only. but one which they will prove by their own deeds and actions to be a true welcome.

Mr. Bell has a more difficult task before him in Uganda than he had six years ago, for he has to meet powerful influences, each working separately, and he has to combat a scourge which is even worse than the scourge of hurricanes. Further, he has to take up the reins so recently laid down by our own Commissioner, a man whose administration was so successful as to make it difficult for any new Administrator to follow.

One of the influences at work in Uganda possibly a greater influence of its kind than in any other colony, is the influence of the missionaries. This influence may be either for good or for evil. Rightly used the influence gained by the missionaries in Uganda is an intelligence, a fine type of the courtly and influence which can be of enormous value to an Administrator, and we call upon all the missionaries in the Protectorate to see that they he has already graduated in the ways of use their lower for the general good. We must Western civilisation so far as to incur the ask them to remember that the Government of Uganda represents the voice of the British people, and they must not allow any small grievance to interfere with their Government they must be in no way selfish, but must remember Imperial interests and missionary interests are synonymous. However, with the Venerable Archdescon Walker at the head of affairs, the new Commissioner need have no apprehensions as to a loyal support of the nation's policy.

To the settlers we would more especially appeal. Uganda cannot hope to become a great country if it is to be dependent on her official residents. They are there to carry out specified duties prescribed, and beyond that they cannot go; it, therefore, reets chiefly on the shoulders of the settler to make Uganda s valuable asset to the Empire. The settlers may generally depend on the local officials active assistance in all that pertains to pro

INTERNATIONAL COTTON CONGRESS.

In connection with the third International Cotton Congress which will be held in Germany ale "in the most public manner, in order to the committee is to be received by the heads procure its general and immediate introduction of the German Government in Berlin on into all parts of the world," which is, at any June 23 and 23, and the congress sitting at rate, sufficiently comprehensive. Evidently the Bremen on the following Monday, Tuesday, little Sun Brewhouse became the Imperial and Wednesday. The subjects for discussion include rules of cotton exchanges, damp in cotton, cotton markets, cotton statistics, and cotton growing. The delegates will be entertai ned by the High Senate of Bremen, the Breme Chamber of Commerce, and the Bremen Cotton Exchange, and they will attend the Kiel Regatta as the guests of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company. BECK & CO'S PILSENER BEER BREMEN.

FEARS NO HONEST COMPETITION FOR QUALITY Beware of evilly disposed competition unning down this very SUPERIOR BRAND OF BEER.

A BROKEN-DOWN SYSTEM. This is a condition (or disease) to which doctors give many names, but which few of them really understand. It is simply weakness—a break-down, as it were, of the vital forces that sustain the system. No matter what may be its causes (for they are almost humberless) hits symptoms are much the same; the more prominent being steeplessness, sense or prostration or weakness, depression of spirits and want of energy for all the ordinally affairs of life. Now, what alone is absolutely essential in all such cases is increased vitality—vigour—

VITAL STRENGTH & ENERGY to throw off these morbid feelings, and experience proves that as night succeeds the day this may be more certainly secured by a course of the cele-brated life-reviving tonic
